Marissa Scott, MPH Human Resources

Marissa is a 2012 Bachelors of Arts graduate of the University of Alabama at Birmingham and a 2016 Master of Public Health graduate of Mercer University. Her educational accomplishments have enabled her to pursue endeavors towards building a world that is compassionate to all persons. Marissa believes in the importance of unhindered access to resources for all community populations and is a fervent supporter of health equity.

Prior to joining Street Grace and the fight against human trafficking, Marissa was a Victim Advocate for the Fulton County Office of the Solicitor General. During her time in this role she championed impartial justice and the restoration of wholeness for victims of domestic abuse and other violent crimes. Preceding her occupation in the criminal justice system, Marissa discovered great fulfillment in ensuring public health and safety as an Environmental Health Specialist for the Cobb and Douglas Public Health Department. In fulfilling the responsibilities of this position, she applied proven measures of prevention and community education to safeguard the lives of countless residents.

Driven by the belief that healthier and safer communities are achievable, Marissa strives to contribute to the realization of better environments that are not only resilient but sustainable. It is Marissa's unceasing aspiration to be part of the solution in the ongoing fight against human trafficking, and she is proud to be a part of the Street Grace team and its enterprise to eradicate the commercial sexual exploitation of children. It is her belief that together our communities and the world can enable at-risk youth, survivors, and their families to overcome the challenges of today and be well-equipped to secure a better tomorrow. Marissa attributes to the grace and power of God not only what she has been able to accomplish thus far, but every degree of good that she hopes to effectuate in the framework of society in the future.
